Mulk Raj Anand, a prominent Indian author with many novels, short stories and critical essays in English and is also considered as the founder of Indian English novel. He is best remembered for his realistic depiction of the poorer classes of people in India.

Mulk Raj Anand was born on 12th December 1905, in Peshawar, a prominent Indian writer primarily known for his concern for the low caste people in the Indian society and portrayed about their wretched lives. His father name was Lal Chand and Ishwar Kaur was his mother. He was among those Indian English writers who gained international readership. Anand produced various forms of literary art and creative writing such as novels and short stories which proved to be the classic works of modern Indian English literature. He studied at Khalsa Collage, Amritsar and got his graduation in 1924. Then he moved to England where he attended University College, London as an undergraduate and after that received Ph.D in Philosophy from Cambridge University in 1929.

His writing career began in England where he used to publish short reviews in T.S. Eliot's magazine, 'Criterion'. Mulk Raj Anand's literary career was an outcome of a family tragedy encountered by the rigidity of the caste system. His first novel,

'Untouchable', was published in 1935, in which he revealed the miserable condition of the lives of untouchable in India. And in this novel, he incorporated the Punjabi and Hindustani idioms into English and was considered as the Charles Dickens of India. At the same time, he also supported freedom elsewhere around the globe and volunteered in the Spanish Civil War. During the world war II, he worked as a script writer for BBC London and there he came into contact with George Orwell, who reviewed Anand's novel 'The Sword and the Sickle'.

After returning to India in 1946, Anand continued with his literary outputs like poetry and essays on a wide range of subjects as well as autobiographies, novels and short stories. Among his novels 'The Village', 'Across the Black Waters', 'The Sword and the Sickle' were written in England. 'Coolie', 'The Private Life of an Indian Prince', 'The Road' were written in India. A literary magazine 'Marg' was founded by him. Anand taught in many universities. He worked with international progress organization on the issue of cultural self-comprehension of nations in the 1970s. He was honoured with the Padma Bhushan, one of India's highest civilian awards, in 1967 for his vast contribution towards the field of literature and education.
